This file includes the abstract, extensive keyword list, and (on the final page) acknowledgements for the video essay “Contrapuntal Thinking in Haydn,” by Peter Schubert, SMT-V 1.2 (2015). (There is no bibliography included with this essay.) This video-essay may be found at https://vimeo.com/societymusictheory/videocast1-2schubert.

SMT-V is the open-access, peer-reviewed video journal of the Society for Music Theory. Founded in 2014, SMT-V publishes video essays that showcase the latest research in music theory in a dynamic, audiovisual format. The journal features a supportive and collaborative production process, and publishes three to four videos per year. The videos may be found at www.smt-v.org.

SMT-V is overseen by an Editor who organizes the vetting of the videos, along with an Associate Editor who aids with the technical details. Members of the editorial board help to vet submitted videos.

Those wishing to publish a video on SMT-V should first submit a written proposal summarizing the proposed project. If the proposed project is deemed appropriate, the author will be invited to submit a draft of a storyboard or script. Upon acceptance of the script, the author will be invited to produce a full video in conjunction with guidance and assessment from selected members of the Editorial Board. Details regarding the submission process are found at https://societymusictheory.org/smt-v/submission_guidelines.

The first eight measures of the finale of Haydn’s Symphony No. 99 are straightforward as to harmony and formal function (they are a textbook period ending in PAC:V). But the first theme group takes on larger proportions as a direct repetition of the basic idea introduces a new formal function. The momentum that Haydn builds up as this first theme group grows in length depends on “contrapuntal thinking.” This video-essay pulls apart the little melodic fragments that Haydn cleverly recombined.
